Cancers are the second leading cause of death in the United States. Most cancers are currently treated with a combination of surgery, radiation and chemotherapy. Despite the combined efforts of these three modalities, many patients still die from their cancer. Chemotherapy, in particular, can cause severe side effects, including nausea, hair loss, loss of appetite, vomiting and stomach pains. As such, there is a need for safer and more effective anti-cancer drugs. In spite of the above developments in anti-cancer therapy, such as the use of taxol and cisplatin, there exists a need to identify new and better anti-cancer drugs. Accordingly, it is an object of the present invention to provide anti-cancer compounds that are less toxic than those currently used in the art. It is another object of the present invention to provide anti-cancer compounds that are active against a wide variety of cancers. It is another object of the present invention to provide methods for the treatment of cancer in mammals. Q: Is there any way to tell if a web-app or web-page is an RSS feed reader? A Google search for RSS reader will result in only one relevant answer, RSS Shells. Is there any other, more widely known way to detect if a website is an RSS feed reader, such as an RSS-aware WebView or RSS View? A: As far 82157476af
